

Hope Sees French Flyers Thursday, Leave Dallas Today

Expect to Reach Kentucky City in 5 Hours and 42 Minutes

NEW YORK SATURDAY

French Airmen Will Fly to New York Saturday, Washington Monday

DALLAS, Sept. 5.—(AP)—Mechanics poured 100 gallons of gasoline into the "Question Mark", and Captain Coste personally supervised minor repairs to the ship in preparation for the flight to Louisville, Ky., this afternoon.

Louisville is 740 miles from Dallas. The fliers expect to make that city in about 5 hours and 42 minutes flying time, if their speed is equal to that of yesterday.

DALLAS, Sept. 5.—(AP)—Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte, Paris-New York-Dallas fliers took off from Love field at 12:30 p. m. today on a non stop flight to Louisville, Ky., where they will spend tonight, returning to New York Saturday.

The pair flew from New York to Dallas to win the $25,000 prize offered by William Easterwood of this city.

Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte, French flyers who this week made the first non-stop flight from Paris to New York, crossed the city of Hope at 4 p. m. yesterday on their $25,000 prize flight from New York to Dallas. They were seen above Little Rock at 3:04, and reached Hope about 50 minutes later. The big red plane Question Mark was flying too high to be clearly identified at either place.

The Frenchmen will probably pass over this city again today, as they are scheduled to return from Dallas as far as Louisville, spending tonight in that city before continuing to New York. On their flight yesterday they followed the great trunk railroad lines from Louisville to Memphis to Little Rock to Hope, Texarkana and Dallas.

Three planes are in the group, a monoplane flying 15 or 20 minutes ahead of the others, acting as pilot plane. Coste and Bellonte, in the Question Mark, reached Hope about 5 o'clock, accompanied by another ship, both appearing at a high elevation. Considerable excitement developed when the monoplane disappeared, flying swiftly, and close to the ground, as many persons thought at first it was the Question Mark. The Frenchmen and their companion plane appeared later.

Coste and Bellonte's actual flying time from Paris to Dallas was approximately 48 hours 34 minutes, over a total distance of 5,700 miles, with their only stop in New York. They flew from Paris to New York, 4,100 miles by the northern route, in 37 hours; and the 1,600 miles from New York to Dallas in 11 hours 34 minutes.

Plans are now under way in the East to send the Frenchmen on a triumphant tour of America, much as Lindbergh was feted after his famous voyage.

Poultry Meeting Scheduled Monday

Superintendents of Fair Poultry Department to Attend

Hempstead County Poultry Association is scheduled to meet Monday night, September 8, in regular monthly session.

At this meeting plans will be discussed for the poultry exhibit of the Southwest Arkansas fair, which starts the 22nd. Those who have poultry are anxious that this year's showing be the best of any previous year.

A. H. Wade of Blevins, a state accredit of poultry, H. E. Thornton of Prescott, a poultry fancier, and Mrs. Charles Locke of Ozan, who has a large flock of poultry, both chickens and turkeys are the superintendents of the poultry department for the fair and all are expected to be present at the association meeting Monday night.

It is understood that an American Poultry Association judge has been secured to judge the poultry exhibit at the fair this year. Such a step is a forward movement in the poultry industry. An A. P. A. judge's report of a show he has judged goes to all parts of the United States and those entrants who have birds that win at the hand of an A. P. A. judge, really have birds of quality.

All members of the Hempstead County Poultry Association, and any other person interested in poultry are urged to attend the meeting Monday night, about 8 o'clock, at the city hall.

The poultry exhibit at the Southwest Arkansas Fair this year will be held in the old exhibit hall, near the midway. This building is large, with plenty of room and light.

Rotary Luncheon Is Well Attended

The Process of Converting Sprucewood Into Rayon Was Shown

The weekly meeting of the Hope Rotary Club, at the Hotel Baciow at noon today, was presided over by Vice-President Charles Spragins in the absence of President George Wade.

The program was in charge of Rotarian Bob Hugenin, chairman of the program committee, who introduced Miss Clarice Cannon, of the Hope Business and Professional Women's club, who in a most impressive way spoke of the unity of interest and co-operative spirit existing between the civic clubs in Hope, and suggested as a future development "the organization of a civic council."

Following the address by Miss Cannon, which was greatly appreciated, Bob Hugenin presented a number of exhibits showing the various processes by which spruce wood is converted into rayon, which has become a highly important item in the merchandising field.

D. W. Stevick, publisher of the Texarkana Gazette, and John Offenhausser, of Texarkana, were introduced and each made a short talk in regard to developing the oil field of which the Lenz well, approximately equidistant between Hope and Texarkana, is the discovery well. Their message was one of goodwill and co-operation, and was well received.

Rotarian Terrell Cornelius is to have charge of the program at the meeting on Friday of next week.

Death Toll Heavy In Santa Domingo After Hurricane

First Direct Cable Comes From Red Cross Official Today

AMERICA WILL AID

Public Contributions Will Be Subscribed and Sent Through Red Cross

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—(AP)—Captain Antonio Silvia, head of Red Cross work in Santo Domingo, today cabled Washington that 1000 persons were killed, 2500 injured, 4700 homes destroyed, 200 homes damaged and 25,000 persons left homeless as the result of the Caribbean hurricane in Santo Domingo city.

No report from other parts of the territory over which the storm passed was available at the time of the cable sent by Captain Silvia.

Just before the startling information of Silvia reached here, Commander Payne of the National Red Cross organization had been advised that the course of the storm had changed and that it would not likely reach Florida or even Cuba.

Charles E. Mitchell, weather forecaster announced that Santo Domingo had in all probably saved Florida from the storm on account of the high mountain peaks breaking the force of the wind at some extent. No warnings have been sent out today along the Florida and Gulf coast.

The cable today, the first direct report of the terror, was sent direct to President Hoover. Public contributions is said to be the basis of relief measures agreed on so far by the Red Cross headquarters. However a conference will be held at once to determine other methods of action.

Red Cross chapters throughout the United States are asked to assist in getting up the contributions.

Already $25,000 has been sent to the stricken area; $15,000 to Mr. Curtis, and $10,000 to President Roosevelt.

HAVANNA, Sept. 5.—(AP)—The hurricane, which Wednesday struck the city of Santo Domingo, has turned northward in its course according to information received here. If that report is correct there will be no danger of the storm reaching either Cuba or Florida.

Four Captured After Gun Fight

Two Youths Suspected of Store Robbery Are Captured

GENEVA, N. Y., Sept. 5.—(AP)—Four young men who today started a running gun fight when told to stop their automobile in Geneva, were under arrest tonight, two wounded. A farmer shot both of them when one reached for a pistol on the command "hands up."

Police said they had confessed robbing an Elmhurst chain grocery last night of $70 and also that their car had been stolen in Petersburg, Va. Chief of Police R. W. Morris of Geneva had suspected them of the Elmhurst crime and tried to stop them. He gave up the chase after exhausting his ammunition and organized a posse which secured the country and captured three of the men, one having fled despite a charge of buckshot in his legs.

The four gave their names as Kenneth Sadler, aged 21, of Richmond, Va.; Kenneth Zellers, 19, of Williamsport, Pa.; Larune Newbire, 19, of Jersey Shore, Pa., shot in the legs, and Russell K. Powell, also of Jersey Shore, shot in the back.

The posse found the automobile abandoned on a little-used road and shortly afterward arrested Sadler and Zellers near Geneva.

Late in the day the others ran into Henry Dye, who had heard of the hunt. He shot down Powell but failed to stop Newbire.

One of the men taken first carried a pistol and later the posse found two duds believed thrown away by two of the others.

Kansas Prisoner Is Hanged Today

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Sept. 5.—(AP)—Carl Panzaran, self declared slayer of 22 persons, was hanged at the Federal prison here early today.

He was serving his sixth prison term. Today as he was led to the gallows he jeered at the crowd who had gathered to witness the hanging.

This is the first legal execution in Kansas since 1870. The Kansas law provide capital punishment only in cases of treason, but the crime for which Panzaran was sentenced was committed on Federal property.

Lonoke Labor Row Is Not Organized

Few Misinformed People Thought to Have Been Responsible

LONOKE, Sept. 5.—(AP)—The Lonoke county grand jury Thursday in a report said its investigation of the recent trouble over labor at a road construction camp near here had determined there was no organized agitation and that it believed the trouble had ended.

The grand jury also found no one responsible for the poisoning of nine children at a school near here a week ago.

As to the labor situation, the report said that a "few misinformed persons" had been responsible for all the trouble, but that it believed there would be no further disorders. Several shots were fired at watchmen on a road construction camp a week ago, and road workers said they had been threatened unless farmers in this vicinity were hired and negro employees of the camp discharged. No one was injured, but Sheriff R. O. Benton asked for and received a detachment of national guardsmen who for a few days guarded the camp.

Highway Officials Confer With Bridge Company Officials

Meeting Held at Hot Springs to Determine Procedure

BLAST VANDAL WORK

No New Clues Have Been Found By Officials Investigating

HOT SPRINGS, Sept. 5.—(AP)—A meeting between C. S. Christian, chief engineer of the Arkansas State Highway department and G. F. Matland, vice president of the Kansas City Bridge company to confer over the rebuilding of the Garland City bridge, which was blasted last Wednesday resulted in Christian making a statement that the Highway Commission should all be present when the bridge question was settled.

Christian said that such a meeting in all probability would be called at Little Rock Monday and the Commission would be asked to attend.

LITTLE ROCK, Sept. 5.—(AP)—State highway officials are scheduled to leave here sometime today for Hot Springs, where they will confer with the officials of the Kansas City Bridge Company.

At this meeting plans for replacement of the center span of the Garland City bridge, blown into the river Wednesday morning by vandals, will be discussed.

The meeting was called by C. S. Christian, chief highway engineer of this city, to ascertain what the future plans of the bridge company officials will be.

G. F. Matland, vice president of the Kansas City firm, said the contractors are unprepared to accept the bridge as theirs, even though the structure had not been formally accepted by the state before Wednesday's explosion. On the other hand Chairman Justin Matthews of the state highway commission has expressed the personal viewpoint that the company's indemnifying bond protects the state against the loss.

Cost of replacing the span was estimated at $150,000, though the total damage as far as the state is concerned might run to $250,000, including loss of tolls, depreciation, interest on bridge bonds, engineering charges and other overhead.

Matland said nothing would be done toward cutting up the huge mass of warped steel until the attitude of the highway commission had been ascertained through conference.

State and county officers and investigators failed to carry the case beyond its status of Wednesday, due to almost complete lack of evidence.

Thinks Democrat Next President

Says Senator Robinson, Young or Roosevelt Will Win Honor

LITTLE ROCK, Sept. 5.—(AP)—Former Governor Charles Hillman Brown of Arkansas, returned to Little Rock after a tour of the East and Middle West, predicted Thursday the democratic party would gain 35 seats in the national house of representatives and seven seats in the United States senate in the November election.

"Unemployment in the East is even more marked and acute than in states like Kentucky and Arkansas, which are primarily agricultural communities, and so-called Hoover prosperity in the eastern states is regarded as a hoax," he said in an interview.

"It is my conviction that the democratic party, if hard times continue, will elect the next president, who, in my opinion, will be either Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas, minority leader in the senate, and delegate to the London naval conference, or Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York, or Owen D. Young."

Chaney Leaves $500,000, Gives Ex-Wife a Dollar

In the will he said: "So there may be no misunderstanding or contest of any kind whatever, I hereby give and bequeath to Cleve Creighton Bush the sum of $1 and no more. ## Winning a Hard Fight

DIUDONNE COSTE, the French trans-Atlantic aviator, would seem to have come very close to clinching a claim to the title of the world's greatest airman.

Certainly his latest feat, in itself, is almost enough to gain him that honor, even if all his other spectacular flights were forgotten. The flight from Paris to New York is conceded by pilots to be one of the most dangerous flights on earth. The aviator who attempts it is practically certain to buck head winds throughout most of his journey. He consequently uses his gasoline more rapidly than he would if he were flying in the direction Lindbergh and Chamberlain flew, and his chances of being forced to come down in mid-Atlantic are much greater.

A survey of previous attempts to make the east-west flight bears this statement out.

Nungesser and Gali made the attempt and vanished. Various British flyers, including an aging countess, met the same fate. The gallant crew of the Bremen just managed to reach a rocky islet off the Labrador coast before their gas gave out. Major Kingsford-Smith was compelled to land 600 miles short of his goal. The American flyers of five or six years ago, and the more recent German flyers succeeded only by breaking their flight into shorter hops.

Coste and Bellonte, however, came through on schedule, as coolly and as efficiently as Lindbergh. They are, in consequence, the idols of the French nation—and of this nation as well.

Flying across the North Atlantic seems to call for three things: a good plane, a good pilot and a decent break in the luck. All who have made the hop have had all three qualifications. In consequence they have amply deserved the plaudits they have received. Lindbergh, Chamberlain, Byrd, Kingsford-Smith—the daring young Frenchman, Coste, belongs in that list of aviation's great ones by virtue of his forethought, his skill and his good fortune.

When Fame Comes

THERE is an oft-repeated story that after Lindy had completed about all his arrangements and was about to set sail alone on the first span of the Atlantic ocean, something was said about the fact that he didn't have any money whatever in his pocket. It seems after buying the gasoline Lindy was as free of cash as a bird of feathers.

"It's all right," a friend is said to have advised him. "If you make it across you won't need any money. If you don't you won't have any use for any money." That was all.

Dorothy Goff, New Orleans miss, had won a little American Legion beauty contest in her home town, which wasn't much of an affair. She was proclaimed a beauty winner in a very local affair, and then she was dropped.

But when the beauties of the world were to gather at Galveston in competition, Dorothy decided to go. Her mother was with her in the determination. New Orleans had forgotten its local beauty prize winner. There was no backing for her effort.

The girl managed to get a $15 gown, and a $3 bathing suit, and she and her mother raised money enough to start them to Galveston and have $3 left in the purse. They certainly bet it all on winning a prize.

A little later when Dorothy Goff returned to her home town of New Orleans she was not alone "Miss United States" but she had also been crowned "Miss Universe." Competitors had been in Galveston from the beauty centers of the world, and Miss Goff had won. Also she and her mother had the $3,000 cash prize money tucked away in their little purse and the had offers from movie firms, and from magazines, and from advertising agencies.

When Dorothy returned to New Orleans she was met by the multitudes. There was an ovation at the depot, and the girl and her mother were escorted to the best suite in the best hotel in New Orleans, and they were interviewed and pictured in the press, and they are on their way to fortune.

Dorothy Now plans a stage career and a movie career, and all that, and she will have some success. She is almost certain to get somewhere, when she had the courage to start to Galveston and compete in a $15 gown and a $3 bathing suit, and with very little lunch money until something might come in.—Hot Springs Sentinel Record.

How Come All the Town Folks Broke?

SAM FRYAR of The Clarksville (Texas) Times puts the whole thing in a nutshell in the following: "Another thing that is eatin' on this country, if you want it in plain United States, is that too few people are producing and too darned many are living off of others." A land owner told us a few days ago that his tenant came to him for some money, saying it was a case of emergency. The landlord let the tenant have twenty dollars, he says, and the next Sunday went over to see if he could figure out what the emergency was, thinking perhaps his tenant had sickness in his family. But it was worse, says the landlord, for when he got over to the farm the tenant had nine visiting relatives who had come in to catch up on their eating. Another farmer, who is doing well in Grayson county, told us that in Alabama he could not make a living because between his kinfolks and his wife's kinfolks it took every cent he could make to feed them when they came visiting. This man said he and his wife agreed to come to Texas, where neither had any kin, and he now owns seventy acres of land and the wolf never gets near his door.—Sherman (Texas) Democrat.

For Winter Grazing

RYE AND OATS

Fall and winter grazing can be obtained by early planting of rye or oats.
Wheat may also be used, but planted later on account of insects.
Abruzzi rye is best to use. Common Southern rye is cheaper and will give fair results. Rozen rye should not be used in this State.
The variety of oats for grazing is not as important as it is for grain.
Livestock feed costs can be greatly reduced by the use of these late fall and winter grazing crops.

SOW RYE AND OATS

Have Green Pasture This Winter. Heavier seeding of rye or oats is needed for pasture purposes than for grain.
Three bushels of oats per acre, one and a half bushels of rye, or a mixture of two bushels of oats and a bushel of rye should be sown on the most fertile land available.
If put on lands fertilized this year, much of the effect of the fertilizer will be obtained.

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON.—Things you'd never have known if the government hadn't announced them recently:

Wild animals, especially moose, are coming to realize that the national parks offer nice, safe vacations. Hunting seasons always find the beasts dashing toward the national parks.

Highway engineers find that heaving of soils because of freezing, or frost action, and the subsequent loss of soil stability due to thawing, is one of their main problems.

Fast refrigerator transportation for dairy products, especially fluid milk, has increased the radius of the milk sheds surrounding our large city markets by hundreds of miles.

More than two-thirds of the alfalfa acreage of the United States is found in the 17 western states.

In a period of low prices for eggs the poultryman has particular need to cull low-producing hens, because in such a period fewer hens will pay their way and also earn more of a profit than in more prosperous times.

The most common cause of death in Nevada in 1929 was diseases of the heart, of which there were 165 among 1199 deaths for the state. Next in order: Pneumonia, 98; tuberculosis, 87; cancer, 80; and nephritis, 72.

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the Department of Agriculture needs assistant and associate warehouse examiners, and applications for the places will be accepted by the Civil Service Commission until Aug. 30. Pay: $2600 to $3700 a year.

The northern half of New Hampshire has been added to the area regulated by quarantine corner provisions.

There were 121,535 marriages performed in New York state during 1929, as compared with 114,318 in 1928 and 97,454 in 1914. There were 5161 divorces granted, as compared with 5293 in 1928 and 3269 in 1914.

Ohio, however, showed an increase in divorces as well as marriages. There were 65,479 marriages in 1929, 69,339 in 1928, 52,692 in 1916, and 15,365 divorces in 1929, 14,643 in 1928 and 7607 in 1916.

There were only 31,287 deaths in Wisconsin during 1929, as compared with 31,788 in 1928.

The housefly is unusually abundant and persistent this summer. Hot, dry weather usually checks the breeding of the insects, but it also invites them to enter houses in search of food and moisture.

Congress appropriated $50,000,000 in April for highway improvement in the federal aid system and as a result there have been jobs for some 4000 men on federal aid road projects.

A total of 45,481 miles of local and country roads, exclusive of state highways, were improved in 1929 by the counties of the 48 states, indicating a total of 710,007 miles of highway in the county road systems.

"Paradise" Island Is Also Dry Island

Officer Tells Where Men Are Vainest Sex, No-body Works

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 5.—(UP)—Found: a place where prohibition is 100 per cent effective. It is on the mid-Pacific island of Rotuma, a small member of the Filian group, as the story is told by Chief Officer H. N. Wilson of the Matson steamship lines. Though natives are only a few generations removed from cannibalism, Wilson said, Rotuma has a prohibition law that absolutely works. "It there is any place in the world where a sailor can't find a drink," Wilson said, "it's on that island. The best we could rate was coconut milk. The tribal chiefs know what liquor is, but they decided it was 'bad medicine.'" est of all, the notion of pulehritude exemplified in its men instead of its women. The women, he said, go comparatively unadmired, while the men are actively unadmired, while the men are embellished with cosmetics. So vain are the native Brummels, he said, that one would give up his favorite coconut grove for a cake of scented soap. "The island is a veritable Garden of Eden," Wilson said. "Tropical fruits grow in such abundance that the natives actually live without toil, except to pick their food off the trees and catch a few fish. Wild game, brightly-colored birds and acres of fragrant flowers complete the picture of Paradise."

HOOKS & SLIDES

by William Braucher

Master-Minding
It would not be strange if the Giants should win the National League pennant this year. John McGraw, man and boy, has won 10 pennants as manager of the Giants. The odd thing about this year's race is that the Giants, in their magnificent drive down the home stretch, have not been managed by Mr. McGraw. The job of master-minding has been handled by Beauty Bancroft, a young fellow whose only experience as a major league manager was a stretch he went through several years ago as boss of the Boston Braves.

McGraw was away from the team for several weeks. While his duties were out on the road, getting the Reds, the Pirates and the Cards the works, the master mind of the Giants was busy in New York with other business. What other business occupied the master mind during this succession of crucial battles in the west nobody seems to know. Maybe he was seeing a fellow about a dog. Or maybe he didn't want to miss seeing Whitehorse and Gallant Fox struggle for second and third at Saratoga.

Meanwhile, at any rate, Dave Bancroft directed the club on the road. And now what puzzles this department is how Bancroft so suddenly mastered the strenuous business of master-minding.

They Like His Minding

MR. MCGRAW, of course, during the crucial games, called Beauty every day long distance and master-minded a couple of minutes over the weather in St. Louis. The smoke in Pittsburgh and the trade conditions in Cincinnati. But, aside from that, Beauty has taken upon his own shoulders almost the entire job of master-minding. And while he

DID YOU KNOW THAT

BUSY days start September 15 for Pop Warner. Stanford lost 11 letter men by graduation, eight of them regulars. The boys say that Justo Suarez, the lightweight from the Argentine, is another Luis Angel Piro all over again. And that there hasn't been a terror like Justo in the lightweight division since Kid Lavigne used to pulverize their ribs. "another splendid little Terry McGovern," one of the scribes says of the boy. He's one of the kind that bares his teeth and bangs away. When Jimmy Zinn, the Coast Leaguer, won his 19th game of the season the other day, he also got five hits in that many times at bat. Zinn was up with the Indians last year, but was sent away because he always seemed indisposed when it was his turn to pitch.

master-minded the boys kept right on winning ball games. Under Beauty's cerebral gymnastics, the Giant pitchers pitched beautifully and the Giant batsmen made the welkin ring with lusty clouts. A couple of newspaper men in Chicago asked Beauty Bancroft how he had kept the team up there so well during trying days on the road. Beauty's reply to that question was amazingly brief and modest.

"I'm just trying to keep the gang hustling until McGraw gets back," said Beauty. "Lotsa pep out there on that old diamond. No sleeping on the job." And not a word about master-minding!

Grace, Once Messenger Boy, Now Manages 'Katy' System

DALLAS, Sept. 5.—(P)—A faculty for remembering facts, figures and faces played a part in the rise of Frank W. Grace from a messenger boy's job to the general management of the Missouri, Kansas and Texas railroad.

And the new "Katy" executive, after 36 years with the road in a dozen different capacities, is optimistic about the future of railroads, and expects improvement in business conditions.

Grace, now 50, started life on a Texas farm, but left high school to join the railroad as a messenger at 14. After five years he became a freight and passenger brakeman, and later a yard clerk.

Then his memory first attracted attention. In checking cars it was said he could pass a train of 30 or 40 cars, glance at the number and owner of each car and later write them accurately in consecutive order.

In 1904 Grace became a yardmaster, and in 1914 was advanced to a train-

Paddock Deserts Track For Law; Running, He Says, Is 'Side Issue'

CHARLIE PADDOCK
The STUDENT
The SPRINTER

Charlie Paddock, once the "world's fastest human," has hung up his sprint spikes, at least for awhile, to study law at the University of Southern California.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 5.—(P)—Now it's Charlie Paddock, the law student. The one-time sensation of the speed paths, his body developed and his pocketbook fattened on fame, is preparing to "settle down."

He is registered in the University of Southern California law school. Lecture tours, writing and movie contracts have put considerable money in Paddock's pockets, but they haven't put the facts in his skull which he needs to shape his future.

Charlie doesn't admit he's through with athletics, but he's waiving now, with fat times under his arm.

"I'm going to make a bid for the Horatio Fall Gardens Are Aided By Rains"

HORATIO, Ark., Sept. 3.—The first rains of beneficial quantities since the beginning of the drought in May, fell here the past week-end and the ground is now in condition for planting fall gardens and feed crops.

Pastures are taking on renewed growth since receiving the moisture and are expected to be great helps in solving the feed problem for a while.

Paddock has no qualms about rubbing elbows, collegially speaking, with those who now are busily engaged rewriting his old records. He knows that they, too, several years hence, must see that sprinting builds no home.

As a proof he can point to the few short years that have elapsed since he was the "great Charlie Paddock"—"the human race horse." Now the only world's record he retains is for 300 meters.

LIGHT-HEADED, TIRED FEELING

Bilious Troubles Relieved by the Help of Thedford's Black-Draught.

Gainesville, Ga.—Mrs. F. A. Watson, of 43 West High Street, this city, says that she has used Thedford's Black-Draught for fifteen years, when needed for such troubles as she mentions below:

"I took Black-Draught for indigestion and the third, worn feeling that comes from biliousness. When I get up in the morning and my mouth tastes bad and my eyes burn, and I feel light-headed, I know that I must take something. And after I heard how good it was, I took Black-Draught. A few doses relieve me so much—make me feel well and strong and clear up my head."

"I don't know what I would do without Black-Draught. It seems to regulate the bowels and rid one of impurities. Thousands of others have written to tell how many disagreeable symptoms, due to constipation, have disappeared after they had taken Thedford's Black-Draught. It is a natural remedy, composed of selected medicinal herbs and roots and put up by modern scientific, accurate methods."

The Hollywood Story

COPYRIGHT 1930 by NEA SERVICE, Inc. by ERNEST LYNN

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Beginning as an extra, ANNE WINTER has progressed rapidly and is now under contract to Grand United, one of the largest of the Hollywood motion picture studios. Anne has been living with two other girls, HENNA HIRSH and J. V. HALL. They are all very nice and extra, but Anne works only occasionally and has not really been in the picture business for long. She is a blonde, has a sweet, friendly smile and a gentle, unassuming nature. She is a native Arkansan and has a heart-breaking story for Anne and Henna.

DAN ROBINSON, former New York newspaper man and now a scenario writer, is in love with Anne. But he has come to regard his feeling for her as a hopeless one. Every step toward Anne makes him realize that she is far from him, especially since his release from Continental. He tries to write her, but his numerous unsuccessful attempts to see her fail.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXIV

"Well, I'll tell you, Horner," Mr. Johnson said, "it might be difficult to give that part to Miss Winter, even if she did qualify. In the first place, there are several other girls around here who will probably want it."

He smiled. "Keeping peace in the family is one of our most difficult jobs at times. Isn't that right, Phillips?"

The scenario chief grinned. "I'll say."

"And it will be up to the director to decide, anyway," Johnson went on. "There's no question about Lester Moore, of course; he's the logical choice for your gangster. But there are half a dozen girls at least, who might do for Jenny. So, you see . . ."

Horner nodded. He said he hoped the other would not think him so foolish, or presumptuous, as to try to tell him what to do. "Especially after you've been so kind to me. But I thought that if we all agreed on Moore—as I had hoped would happen—you might think a suggestion was in order. When I was working on that treatment there, I had Anne Winter in mind as well as Lester Moore."

He smiled apologetically. "You see, I know what Anne Winter can do, and I don't believe you do." That, he admitted to himself, was not true; he didn't know what Anne was capable of; he only believed he did. But he knew what Anne Winter wanted to do.

"Wouldn't it be possible," he suggested, "to give Anne Winter a test for the part? You could soon find out whether she can play it or not. I've got a lot of brass, I know," he added with a grin. "But I've got an idea that in the end you may thank me for this."

Johnson and Phillips both laughed. "Well, you make it sound pretty reasonable," the former admitted. "I've got an open mind, but I don't mind telling you I'm from Missouri. I'll tell you, now, I'll suggest to the director that Miss Winter be given a test, but I won't go beyond that. We don't believe in interference. It'll be Garry Sloan, I guess. If Sloan agrees—"

IT would be Sloan, Dan thought, and the rest of the other's words were lost on him. He thought it strange then that it had not occurred to him before—the possibility of Garry Sloan's being chosen; but the idea had never entered his head.

MR. JOHNSON let the matter rest there; he began to talk of other things. Might as well get down to brass tacks, would Horner be ready to start at once on the scenario?

"First thing tomorrow morning," Dan said.

"That's fine," He rose and held out his hand, laid the other hand on Horner's shoulder as he walked with him to the door.

"Just to tip you off," Phillips said in a low voice as they walked down the hall, "when the boss says he may offer you a contract, that means he will. Johnson's pretty cautious, that way, but his word's better than a gold bond. And," he added, "I'll be damned glad to have you with us."

He asked then if Dan would like to be shown around the lot. "I'll tie up myself, but we can get hold of someone in the publicity department to take you around. Might as well look the place over, that's what you're going to be working here."

So Horner was taken in tow by an agreeable young man from the publicity department. The tour was a short one, though, because only one stage was busy at the time; and when they returned to the offices Dan asked him if he knew whether Miss Winter was around. After some inquiries his guide learned that she had left for the day.

Shortly afterward Dan departed, and he drove at once to the bungalow, where he found Anne and Mona in aprons, preparing dinner. Anne said at once, "Dan, you've brought good news! I can see it in your face."

And he admitted that that was true. "It went over, Anne; Grand United bought it."

"Oh, that's wonderful! Dan! Sit down and tell me all about it. Dinner can wait. Mona, we simply have to hear this right away; I can't wait another minute."

He laughed happily, knowing no other triumph that could equal this present one; and he followed them to the sofa, where they made him sit between them and relate the thing from beginning to end.

"Talk about a break!" Dan said joyfully, with an arm around each of them. "I still don't believe it. Anne, pinch me, will you?"

They were excited, animated listeners; they were unable to keep from interrupting his recital with eager exclamations.

"A contract, Dan! That's wonderful!"

"Well, maybe. That remains to be seen."

And Dan saved something for the end. "The best is yet to come," he said, looking at Anne. "They may give you a chance, Anne, at the part of Jenny. How'd that be? I spoke to Johnson about you, and he promised that he'd suggest to the director that you be given a test."

"Dan, you didn't!"

"I sure did."

"HOW did you ever dare?"

"Why don't you behave?" Mona demanded. "What do you mean, dare? Why shouldn't he?"

"Sure, why shouldn't I?" said Dan. "But listen, Anne, Garry Sloan's the director. You'd better see him right away and tell him you'd like that screen test. Tell him you'd like to play that role and you want to show him what you can do. Don't be afraid to speak up, because if you don't he might make up his mind on somebody else before you get a chance."

Anne shook her head. "Oh, I can't do that."

"Why not? Johnson's going to suggest it to him. Sloan can't take your head off for telling him how much you'd like it," Dan said. "Sloan likes you, doesn't he?"

Anne looked at him a little queerly and made a denial. "Why should he? He has been kind, of course, but—"

"Just the same," Mona put in, "you do as Dan says. Don't be afraid to ask for what you want. They'll think a lot more of you for it, won't they, Dan?"

Horner agreed, and Mona said, "Remember what happened when you turned down that first contract. That didn't hurt your standing any, did it? Johnson didn't care, did he? Tell 'em what you want, Anne. If I ever get along as far as you've gone I'll speak my place all right—loud and often."

Mona laughed. "You wouldn't see little Mona overlooking any breaks. Just let me at 'em!"

"Just what did you tell Mr. Johnson about me?" Anne asked, and Dan related what had taken place that afternoon. He and Mona argued persuasively enough to win her consent to speak to Garry Sloan at the first opportunity.

"Another thing," Dan said. "You might as well be learning a few of these lines. You can be going through them at home here." He brought a pencil out of his pocket and asked if there was any paper handy.

"There's a couple of scenes I'd like to give you a few notes on. Remember the place, Anne, where Michael is framed and the cops take him away, and Jenny learns that he thinks she was the one who framed him?"

She nodded.

"Well, there's a real spot for Jenny there. It's a good scene. I'll jot down the lines for you."

HE began to write on the pad that Mona brought him, and Anne beside him leaned close to him and watched the rapidly moving pencil, mouthing the words as he wrote them down.

"And here's another pretty good one, Anne. You might as well be going over this one too. Remember it?"

She bobbed her head eagerly, and her eyes shone. "I think I can remember everything in the play, Dan. Oh, it's just a wonder! Mona, tell him how much I've talked about it to you. I'd give anything to play that part."

"I'm really beginning to think she would, Dan," Mona said, laughing. She got up then and slipped out of the room, and from the kitchen she called back to Anne that she was going ahead with the dinner.

"But don't worry about me spoiling anything. I'm just slicing the tomatoes."

Anne smiled and called out something in reply. "Poor Mona and her cooking!" she exclaimed softly, and bent once more over Dan's writing.

Horner leaned back and tapped the end of the pencil against his chin. "How does Mona feel now—better?"

"Yes, a great deal."

"Heard from Eva?"

"No."

Mona called again to ask Dan if he would stay for dinner. She came to the doorway to repeat the invitation, and the sun, streaming through the green-curtained window behind her, made flame of her red hair.

"Steak, Dan—and salad that little Mona is fixing all by herself. Better stay."

And Anne urged him. "Yes, do." "For the sake of the salad, then, yes," he said, and Anne left his side and went to the kitchen.

He continued for a few more minutes to write, and when he put the pad aside he joined the girls in the kitchen, crying loudly that he wanted to be put to work.

"And don't think I can't cook a steak. Say, this is going to be a regular party. It's Horner's night to bowl, girls. After dinner, Miss Winter will entertain with a rendition of a couple of swell scenes from a swell play, and then we're all going to go places and do things. Right?"

"Right," said Mona.

War, Auto Cause Insane Increase

French Has More Crazy People Than Country Can Accommodate

PARIS, Sept. 3.—(UP)—Hectic Parisian life and bitter memories of the World War are driving so many French people into insane asylums that the French government has suddenly found itself with more crazy people on its hands than it can accommodate.

Steadily since the war there has been a continual increase in the number of persons admitted to mental hospitals. There are 87 insane asylums in France and they are taxed to capacity. The government is considering the rapid construction of emergency hospitals to take care of emergency cases.

The total number of demented patients for the region of Paris is now around 23,000, while public health officials note an alarming increase in the number of new patients this year. The six leading hospitals in and around Paris are crowded to the doors and to take care of new and pressing cases some of the older patients are moved to provincial institutions for confinement.

The assistants of M. Desire Ferry, Minister of Public Health, have been studying the reasons for the alarming increase in the number of demented patients every year. Their studies lead them to believe the greater majority of mental derangement is caused from too fast and hectic a life, or from worries and fears growing out of the war.

Several doctors believe that modern Paris traffic is partially responsible for the mental condition of some of the asylum inmates. Harassed throughout life by wildly dashing taxis, the day eventually arrives, declare these doctors, that something snaps in their brains.

Every day in France 10 persons are killed in automobile accidents, a figure which has led Premier Andre Tardieu to issue strict orders that driving permits must be taken away from persons unfit to conduct an automobile. Statistics show that 1,624 persons were killed by automobiles throughout France in 1929, while last year the total was 3,717.

Wife Seeks Sub Trip Under Arctic Ice; 'I Could Be Cook,' Says Lady Wilkins

Susanne Bennett, who is the wife of Sir Hubert Wilkins, hopes to accompany him on his submarine expedition into the arctic.

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—(P)—When Sir Hubert Wilkins has the nervous habit of bobbing off to the world's odd corners where even letters are impossible, the thing to do is to go with him.

So reasons Susanne Bennett, whose husband is Sir Hubert Wilkins.

If it's possible, Lady Wilkins means to accompany her explorer-husband when he sets off in a submarine next year to see what's under the Arctic ice.

"I really don't see any reason why I shouldn't go," Lady Wilkins said. "I've been down in a submarine and it isn't bad at all. Much safer, I'd think, than an airplane."

Women can stand as much hardship as men; more in some instances, for they have greater reserve strength. "I wouldn't mind that end of it at all—one couldn't have all the comforts of a New York apartment, but it would be marvellously thrilling."

"Besides, I could make myself valuable. I can cook."

Lady Wilkins, who is on the stage, and the explorer were married about a year ago. Only a few weeks later he went to the Antarctic. This summer they have been in Europe on their "honeymoon."

So far Sir Hubert hasn't been expected to win over to the submarine proposition for his wife.

"Wait until you see the submarine," he tells her.

"But he hasn't said 'no,'" Lady Wilkins points out.

Ice Cream Demand Is Low In England

Not a Single Ice Cream Parlor in All Great Britain

LONDON, Eng., Sept. 5.—(UPI)—Forty-two million Britons eat less than 10,000,000 gallons of ice cream annually. The average consumption per capita is less than a quart every 12 months.

These figures, given to the United Press by the office of the American Commercial Attache following two months survey, show that the average American consumes from 40 to 50 times the amount of ice cream that a Briton does. By virtue of this ratio it is estimated that the American eats ice cream from 30 to 40 times more frequently than the Briton, since British portions are generally smaller.

The 10,000,000 gallons of ice cream manufactured yearly in Great Britain include frozen fruit juices, frozen ice cream powder and water, ices and real ice cream.

Ice cream made in Great Britain contains from 7 to 10 per cent fat content as contrasted to the 12 to 15 per cent found in American made ice cream. British-made ice cream contains no corn starch, but as a whole, less sugar and eggs are used than in the American-made food.

The ice cream season in Great Britain opens about the first of June and continues until the middle of September. During this short season tea rooms, cafes, and restaurants hang small placards in windows advertising ices.

Vanilla and strawberry are practically the only two flavors manufactured. Pineapple, lime, lemon, grape, raspberry, tutti-frutti, fruit pudding and orange ice are unheard of. Chocolate banana nut, chocolate malt, maple nut, peach and cherry ice creams are not made, unless by special order.

Small scoops are the common measures used. Iced drink seldom are seen with a float for the crest of the drink, nor are ice cream cones popular. Common ice cream milk shakes are sometimes seen, but rarely.

One large eating house just off Piccadilly Circus serves ice cream, the year-around, but during a majority of the months a five-gallon ice cream can filled with cubes, similar in size and make to the American bricks, lasts two weeks despite the fact that more than 1000 people are served daily by the eating house.

Manufacturers of ice cream generally make the frozen dainties as a sideline, often allowing ice cream machinery to stand idle during a major portion of the year. Advertising of ice cream is seldom conducted and little knowledge about the food values, both winter and summer, of ice cream is known.

There is not a single ice cream parlor in all Great Britain, that is, not a single establishment run only to serve customers with ice cream. Wherever ices are obtained, they are merely a sideline.

A New Record In New picture Transmission

This picture, rushed to Hope Star by airplane, telephoto from far inside the Arctic circle, is the first to reach the United States showing Dr. Gunnar Horn and his sealing vessel Bratvaag en route to Tromsø, Norway, with the bodies of Sauleman Auguste Andree and his Swedish co-explorers, found on remote White Island, 33 years after the ill-fated balloonists took off for a flight over the North Pole. Dr. Horn is standing on the ship's bridge. Relics, including sleds and Andree's diary, also were brought back by the Bratvaag.

The picture, was taken from a seaplane chartered by NEA Service which met the sealer in the Barents Sea, north of Tromsø. It was flown back to Tromsø and then to Stockholm by another chartered plane. From Stockholm it was telephotoed to London, via Berlin. The picture was radiophotoed from London to New York, where it again was placed on telephoto wires for distribution throughout the United States.

Urge Planting of Fall Garden Crop

Claim Plenty of Rain Has Fallen in This Section For Garden

The fall crop of vegetables is beginning to make its appearance in Hope just now. These early truck crops are returning to the farmers who are shrewd enough to outwit the weather and produce them despite the drought, some of the much in demand cash. The production of these crops is an extremely competitive game. The grower not only competes with his neighbors to see who can get the biggest quantity first and of proper quality, but he competes with unfavorable weather conditions and the grower in the Valley where they irrigate or where they have more moisture than here. The men who are able to meet this keen competition and get on the market with a quality product is rewarded with a cash prize. The folks in town are crying for such vegetables, and cry with a noise of jingling quarters and half dollars.

We cannot all share in this early cash money, but we can, according to County Agent Lynn Smith, produce these vegetables and truck crops for home consumption, with the result that we can keep the doctor and the Red Cross from our door. It is also true that in scattered sections of the county not enough rain has fallen to enable us to plant these fall crops, but if we keep ourselves ready a shower will come, if we are ready to get the maximum benefit when it does come we can grow such crops. These crops mean a living, and it is well for all of us to keep in mind that after all if we get that just now we are doing pretty well.

Museum Restores Body of Sloth That Lived In Arizona Ages Ago

Remnants of the body of a prehistoric yellow sloth enabled scientists to reconstruct the animal as it looked 500,000 years ago (above). Professor R. S. Lull (below) plans search for other animals that lived at same time.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 4.—(P)—A pale yellow beast that roamed in Arizona 500,000 years ago has been restored to its original form at Peabody Museum. Even quiet-spoken scientists call the feat "remarkable."

This animal is one of the world's rare remnants of the varied animal color schemes familiar to antiquity. Unlike other prehistoric fossils, this one still retains some of its hide and hair, in five different patterns.

The bones still were held together by ligaments, giving an unusual opportunity to restore the creature, a ground sloth, just as he looked one day half a million years ago when he stepped into a death trap left by an extinct Arizona volcano.

Piecing together the telltale marks at the bottom of the trap, Prof. Richard Swann Lull of Yale plans further search for bones of animals the marks of whose teeth still were visible on the sloth.

There is hope of finding a megatherium of a mylodon.

The sloth's hair is pale yellow, smooth fairly coarse and evidently made an effective protective coating, although it lacked trace of the woolly undercoat known on some sloths. It is now very brittle.

To laymen one of the beast's most remarkable characteristics is the way he walked, with the paws of his long forelimbs bent, much as a gorilla walks on its knuckles.

"The effect," says Prof. Lull, describing the animal, "is somewhat weird, with the extremely broad and powerful rear portion and the curious feet."

"One is impressed with the general utility of the fore limbs not only in pulling down branches of low trees and shrubbery but for digging and defense since the claws, both front and rear, would be cruel weapons."

A hardened food ball was found, remnants of the sloth's last meal. It consisted of twigs, roots, branches and a little sand, all else having been digested.

It is indicated that this sloth probably lived upon roots and sage brush, which he dug or pulled up and ate entire.
